

Managing Projects That Succeed – Tactical Excellence

Why do so many projects fail to deliver the expected results, never mind exceed them? Lack of a tactical mindset and underdeveloped project-management skills or processes are usually the culprit. It's never enough to simply delegate a project and hope for the best. The person who will be responsible for its outcome needs a degree of expertise in tactical management, plus a fail-safe process to follow. In Eagle's Flight's experiential learning program, Tactical Excellence™, participants will not only learn such a process, but will learn it in an easy-to apply construct that is streamlined for everyday, real-world use. The program will allow employees to return to work empowered and equipped with the skills to deliver all projects on time and on budget, for the best possible results.

THE OUTCOME

Individuals will return to work with the ability, tools, and confidence to:

- Benchmark performance against client expectations, and discover opportunities to exceed them
- Obtain buy-in from all stakeholders for the determined course of action
- Formulate actionable goals reflecting the resources and information available
- Implement an integrated communication plan
- Design flexible project plans and Gantt charts
- Create realistic contingency plans that are actionable in the case that they are needed

THIS ISN'T YOUR ORDINARY LEARNING EXPERIENCE

An Eagle's Flight experiential learning program is unlike anything you or your participants have seen before – it's not another lecture, case study, or role-play. It's an immersive, learn-by-doing experience, where the learning is embedded in an engaging activity. Why do we do this? It allows participants to simply be themselves in the experience, and act as they normally would at work. This is where true behavior change begins.

By personally experiencing the results that come from applying their existing behaviors, participants see the link between their performance in the experience and the changes they need to make to maximize performance at work. A powerful debrief reinforces the lessons learned in the experience and shows how to apply those lessons back on the job. New competencies are developed, learnings are retained, and individuals are more likely and better able to enthusiastically apply their new knowledge to improve their day-to-day performance.

"The use of your experiences to build understanding and conviction is an Eagle's Flight trademark; and one which, in my opinion, is a true differentiator that sets you apart from all others in your field."
