Productivity and Performance - Gold of the Desert Kings

We are all guilty of confusing activity with productivity from time to time. If we're busy, we must be making headway, right? Not always. A lot of this busyness can go undetected until the results come in, at which point it's too late. The solution to this all-too-common problem is to equip your employees with the understanding and tools they need to maximize productivity and performance. In Eagle's Flight's engaging experiential learning program, Gold of the Desert Kings™, participants discover how activity and productivity are different, the role of planning and execution, and the benefit of shifting to a mindset which constantly considers "what's possible" in order to maximize performance.

THE OUTCOME

Individuals will return to work with the ability, tools, and confidence to:

- Differentiate between activity that moves you away from your goal, and productivity that moves you closer
- Eliminate perceived limitations by adapting a maximizing mindset of "What's Possible?" instead of "What's Required?"
- Optimize productivity and results by planning, preparing, and executing a strategy while never losing sight of the objective
- Obtain, evaluate, and apply information, and adjust plans to contend with pressure and surprises
- Apply the habits of focused productivity

THIS ISN'T YOUR ORDINARY LEARNING EXPERIENCE

An Eagle's Flight experiential learning program is unlike anything you or your participants have seen before – it's not another lecture, case study, or role-play. It's an immersive, learn-by-doing experience, where the learning is embedded in an engaging theme intentionally and apparently unrelated to participants' work environments. Why do we do this? It allows participants to simply be themselves in the experience, and act as they normally would at work. This is where true behavior change begins.

By personally experiencing the results that come from applying their existing behaviors, participants see the link between their performance in the experience and the changes they need to make to maximize performance at work. A powerful debrief reinforces the lessons learned in the experience and shows how to apply those lessons back on the job. New competencies are developed, learnings are retained, and individuals are more likely and better able to enthusiastically apply their new knowledge to improve their day-to-day performance.

"The use of your experiences to build understanding and conviction is an Eagle's Flight trademark; and one which, in my opinion, is a true differentiator that sets you apart from all others in your field."
